Associate Professor Russell Ross has served as the Secretary of the Economic Society of Australia's Central Council for over 11 years. Russell's institutional knowledge, enthusiasm and wisdom have been a valuable asset to the Society over that time and he has been a key plank in its smooth functioning.

Russell has volunteered his time despite his own busy career as an academic at the University of Sydney focusing on public policy and labour market issues. Prior to his involvement with the Economic Society, he served as President of the Australian Society of Labour Economists from 2007 to 2010 and Vice President from 2004 to 2006.

This award recognises his willingness to give his own time and to go above and beyond in the service of the broader economic profession.
